Scott Henderson is musing about the names of recording studios in Victoria. "People seem to name their studios like they would name their boats," he says. "I mean, I think pretty much every studio in this city has something to do with water in its name—like Great Wave, Sea Coast, Ambient Wave...What's this obsession with water?"

Scott has a far less ambitious title for his studio. A few years ago, while on a break from recording his band Shovlhed, Scott's dog Roger got sick and relieved himself all over the floor of the studio. Roger is gone now, but he left behind a legacy: Sea of Shit Studios was born.

Scott Henderson has been recording local music in Victoria on and off since 1980. Two-thirds of the music that gets put on CD or cassette in the Garden City goes through Sea of Shit. Some of these bands are becoming well-known nationally, and in some cases, internationally. Nomeansno, Pigment Vehicle, Pressure Cooker, and the Dayglo Abortions are just a few groups that have passed through Henderson's doors.

Scott is also a musician. He is currently playing with several bands, including the Vinaigrettes, Swell Prod, Hissanol, and the Show Business Giants—who are being distributed by the huge Virgin record label.

Henderson's studio, in the basement of his Colwood home, has become a kind of mecca for up and coming bands. Scott is known in the city as being easy to work with, and he charges a fraction of what many studios charge.

"It's not for everyone though," he says. "It's great for nuts and bolts rock and roll. If you want a clean and fancy place with wood lined walls, this isn't for you. Really, I've seen cleaner coal mines."

Scott is sitting in his basement, in a little room just outside the studio—within easy reach of the beer fridge. In some places, the walls are stacked from floor to ceiling with old records. A Minnesota North Stars banner is tacked to the ceiling and an old poster of David Lee Roth greets you at the door.

Scott leans back in his chair and rests a Moretti beer on his belly. His long hair is tied back in a pony-tail, and a black Alternative Tentacles hat is perched on his head. A baby monitor sitting on the stereo next to him hisses quietly.

"A lot of work I do here is for friends," he says. "Nomeansno recorded their new disk here. It was fun. We recorded stuff, played darts, and Sylvia made chili."

Sylvia is Scott's partner, with whom he shares the house and their two children. Scott says that he and Sylvia are married in every way, except legally. He does not see the point in having an expensive ceremony to prove what everyone already knows—although he adds that it would be a good excuse for a party.

Scott enjoys working with the different bands and different musical styles of Victoria's music scene.

"But I won't work for assholes or anybody whose music isn't my cup of tea. If I don't like their music, then there's nothing I can really do for them," he says.

The baby monitor lets out a cry and Scott disappears. Over the monitor he can be heard in the next room. "Yooou monkeeee, yooou monkeeee," he coos softly.

Moments later he returns with his baby, Ivy. She takes the place of the beer, resting on his belly.

Although Henderson likes all kinds of music, he's always had a particular affinity for punk rock.

"What I've always found to be so cool about punk rock, is that it's really hands-on. Say you're a Blind Melon fan. What are the chances of you ever getting to know the band? Whereas when Black Flag came to town, they stayed at my house."

Scott says that a big problem in Victoria is finding a place to play. Harpo's Cabaret used to have local alternative bands all the time. Bands got paid, although not much, and people would come to see the shows. However, Harpo's has been bought by new owners who have changed the format, which now rarely includes local music.

The phone rings and Scott puts Ivy on the floor so he can answer it. She crawls around and begins to play with all the myriad of stuff that litters the floor—from records to amplifiers to a camcorder.

Scott was born and raised in Victoria. He has lived here for all his 36 years, except one, which he spent in Toronto. He hated it, although it did make him appreciate the quality of Victoria's music scene more. According to Scott, Victoria's music scene is pretty unique, whereas in Toronto it seems really manufactured. "OOh, like, I can't wait for that next Junkhouse (a mainstream Toronto band) album to come out," he says sarcastically.

When he was in highschool, Scott was shot in the chest by another kid with an assault rifle. The kid was in the militia and had been obsessed with the Vietnam War. Scott almost died.

"You could say I'm anti-gun," he says.

As a result of the accident, Henderson received about $35,000 in compensation. However, he got some bad advice from people close to him and invested the money poorly. In the end, he lost over $25,000 through shoddy real estate deals.

"That was a big mistake," he says. "I wish I had gotten into the music business back then. I should have bought equipment with the money. Instead, I'm 36 years old and I'm just starting to have my career now."

Scott hangs up the phone. Ivy is battering an autobiography of Brain Wilson that is lying on the floor. Scott takes away the book and replaces it with a pocket knife.

"Here, play with that instead," he says. "It's more dangerous."

He holds up the book, "I'm reading this right now. It strikes me that this guy must've done a lot of acid."

Scott leans back in his chair again. "Something that radio stations and nightclubs seem to have forgotten is that they exist because there are musicians and bands out there. You wouldn't believe how many places have that backwards," he says.

Another thing that bothers Scott is that a lot of bands in Victoria now seem to have managers.

"There's a lot of money in alternative music right now, and these guys smell money," he says. "My advice to musicians is 'sign nothing.' If a guy wants to help, let him. If he really does help, pay him. If he doesn't, send him on his way."

In fact, Scott seems to have a strong dislike for anyone or anything that takes power away from musicians. He hates being called a "producer."

"Producers are professional assholes. They just tell bands what to do, and I hate that," he says. "I'm not a producer, although I did produce Sandra Lockwood's disc. But that was because it was just piano and voice. I set up some arrangements with other musicians—brought in some oboes and stuff that I thought would sound cool."

Although Scott has made over two hundred recordings for different musicians, he does not really see it as a business.

"It's more of a hobby right now. I hardly make any money doing it, and this is a terrible place for a studio. The ceiling is way too low. But what can I do? If I dig down, the place will flood every winter. Ideally, I'd like to build a new one that is more plush, with high ceilings and two mixing boards, an honest-to-God pro studio."

However, Scott has no intention of becoming a serious businessman. For him, that would take all the fun out of music. And music should, above all else, be fun.

Scott does not think that the move to a real studio will necessarily change the way he works. He points out that punk rock icon Jello Biafra owns Alternative Tentacles Records and makes good money, but still has fun doing it.

"I do some recordings for Alternative Tentacles, and they pay me early. Other labels would think that's crazy. Tentacles thinks like me. Jello runs it like a record collector. He loves music. When he comes to town, we hit all the second hand record shops."

Scott guesses that he won't be able to move to a new place for about five years. When he moves, it's a good bet that his dream studio won't be named like a boat, and there won't be any mention of water.

"People always name their boats things like 'Sea Princess.' Why is that? If I had a boat, I think I'd call it 'Dirtchute' or something along those lines. Yeah, that would be great: 'Dirtchute!' ▲

This year, they will be discussing plans for the International Women's Day Broadcast on March 9, 1996. To get involved or for ore info, call Peggy at 721-8702.

In programming news, a new show dedicated to DJ Dance music has premiered, called Bass Culture. The show runs on Friday night from 8:00-9:00; Black and Tan, featuring all forms of music of African-North America can be heard on Thursday mornings from 6:00-8:0 am. And don't forget to tune in to Freaky Flow, where host Peter D. is always up for giving you his perspective of the Sound Advice/Sons of Intellect controversy. In other words, a different subject. ah yes. mr bus. im glad youre here. please have this seat. these parallel lines you see before you are, of course, only artist renditions of the proposed changes we discussed on the phone earlier. but im told that these are a very similar likeness. mr bus replies, but very slowly, and tries to wear his foe down. he is a cunning adversary, not unlike the monolith in twothousandandone, a space odyssey. id like you to explain the proposed changes to me again, he said. and while we are at it, he continued

In 1996, a crack rock n' roll commando unit was sent to prison for rawking too hard. These men promptly escaped from a maximum security stockade to the Nanaimo and Victoria underground. Today, still wanted by the government, they survive as rock n' roll soldiers of fortune. If you have a problem, if no one else can help, and if you can find them, maybe you can hire...the Papillomas...

I was in trouble—I too was running from the law. Luckily I was able to find the Papillomas. I was able to meet up with three of the outlaws in the seedy underbelly of Nanaimo. When I walked into the room, I was met with a cool sense of debonair and the smell of fresh baked cookies.

"I thought there were four of you," I questioned hesitantly.

I was told the fourth would be along shortly after he finished a "job." Moments later, the machismo factor was upper by the arrival of the mysterious fourth. I wanted to know what I was getting into, so I asked some simple questions to find out what their angle was.

I was introduced to them by their aliases and professions when not rockin' n' rollin'. First was Michael Kissinger, substitute teacher and brains behind the outfit. Next was David Melville Blackman, musician, chief beer tester, and technical expert. Thirdly was Mr. Shane Yakelashkek, currently in-between professions, and the suave smooth talker. Lastly is Richard Anthony Travaie, of the Sicilian Travaies, exotic dancer and wrestling expert.

I was getting some good information, but I felt they were holding something back. I proceeded to probe deeper using word association. The results are as follows:

TRIGGERWORD	RESPONSES
	Mike	Shane	Dave	Rich
Light	Bright	Bright	Saber	Dark
Gowan	Light	Larry	Piano	Rock
Smurf	-ette	Uncle	-ette	-ette
False	Testicles	-etto	Teeth	True
Sexy	Loverboy	Canary	Breasts	David Hasselhoff

A large part of the Papillomas lifestyle includes a Wednesday ritual known as "Beverly Hills, 90210." When asked about the ongoing rivalry between Kelly Taylor and Valerie Malon, and the upcoming confrontation, the Papillomas believed that Valerie would be victorious unless Kelly was amped on cocaine. The Papillomas experienced a major blow this year when Dylan McKay left the show. This event was so earth shattering, it almost ended the band. If it wasn't for many of the projects they already had in-progress, the Papillomas may have been no more.

Just a few short months after the Papillomas third release Corolla (first on CD) hit the shelves, they are already undertaking many new plans to boost them into Superstardom. First they will be rockin' their way across Canada, playing at every truckstop and I.H.O.P. along the way to promote Corolla, so go see them in yr town. Then they are planning a Platinum Blonde tribute album. The Papillomas will be contributing four songs, "Crying Over You," "Doesn't Really Matter," "Standing in the Dark," and "Not in Love." Other bands are urged to submit tracks to Papilloma headquarters. The Papillomas planned on starting a musicians Pudding Wrestling League, but they ate all the pudding, so they will be trying other sports such as bowling and road hockey. To apply for your team send a self addressed stamped envelope to "Yo-Yo With Dave Gogo," c/o The Papillomas. Finally, their biggest project to date will be a three hour Oliver Stone feature film documenting the band's history. Mike will be played by Mike Reno of Loverboy. Rich will be portrayed by Chris Farley from Saturday Night Live. Shane will be represented by Luke Perry, aka, Dylan McKay. The part of Dave is still up in the air between Lavar Burton and Hootie. Working titles include: "The Flab Four," "Shane and the Fatboys," "Stairway to Cheese," and "The Jay Semko Story." Watch for it coming to a theatre near you.

If you need to find the Papillomas, they will be heading down the Highway of Cool towards Graceland, eating greasy food in the Corolla that drives eternal. Remember kids, if you're ever in trouble, just shout the Papilloma motto, "Whatever you do, don't give them the potato," and they'll come, um...running?

On wed, Jan 10th, Gallery 6 (formerly Blink), and Santo (formerly Cow With A Blade) got together for a chat, excerpts from which comprise this article. Both bands have a lot in common to talk about such as having changed their name, new releases, song writing, band dynamics, etc. This discussion took place in the Santo practice room, which smells worse than the Gallery 6 practice room, Andy transcribed it and Peter edited it.

On Names

G6(Scott): Was there a big change when you changed from Cow with a Blade to Santo? Did the band change or was it just the name?

Santo(Caleb): We were changing a lot at the time and it was just one of the changes.

G6(Shane): Well you're pretty young eh, I guess that happens around that time (laughter), those big changes in life.

Santo(Caleb): Voice, hair in weird places ...

G6(Shane): ...becoming a man

G6(Andy): ...so Cow with a Blade wasn't manly enough?

Santo(Shane): (Laughter) Yeah, that's it

G6(Andy): So, it wasn't to avoid confusion with that local band that had a big wooden cow instead of a drummer?

G6(Dennis): I thought that was you guys for a long time

Santo(Chris): Oh no! (laughter)

G6(Dennis): It's that band with the cow on stage, its got to be Cow with a Blade; and all their songs were about hockey!

G6(Shane): Do you guys like the name Gallery 6? No one else has seemed to like it so far.

Santo(Shane): Where did the name come from?

G6(Shane): Oh, nowhere...

Santo(Caleb): I don't know if I like it better than Blink, but I like it

G6(Scott): We just got so sick because we went for 3 months trying to find a name, and nothing we came up with we could ever agree upon. We were sort of in that space where its like should we get a name that reflects the band or reflects the sound or reflects nothing and just make it fit. None of us could come to terms with how we each saw or heard the band so we went with a name that meant nothing; at least that's the story I'm sticking to...and its important to have a number in the name; the older you guys get you'll realize that. (laughter)

Santo(Scott): Well, we're in the all popular "S's. I mean G?

G6(Scott): But they'll find us when they're looking for Gowan! (laughter)

G6(Andy): I heard that when you guys first started you were a Pixies tribute band?

Santo(Shane): We did Pixies covers for a high school talent show

Santo(Caleb): That's where Cow with a Blade, the name, was spawned, and that's why we sort of outgrew it, because it was sort of just a joke at the time.

G6(Andy): So if you started as a Pixies tribute band how are you different now?

Santo(Caleb): We sort of molded into our own sound; started writing our own songs and trusting our own ideas.

On Recording

G6(Scott): So how did you guys record this new tape? (String Fellow Hawk, available at fine silverware emporiums everywhere)

Santo(Shane): Just so quick and just so solid...

Santo(Caleb): One day—10 hours for like 9 songs...

Santo(Shane): ...no guitar overdubs, just vocals—live off the floor.

Santo(Caleb): And he charged us an ungodly cheap amount, which really undervalues his services.

G6(Dennis): Who was it?

Santo(Caleb): Peter Johansen

G6(Shane): We talked with him; we were going to consider using him when we recorded (Kyle's Three Grand, available at most gas station kiosks), but opted to do ourselves in our jam spot.

G6(Scott): And then we mixed with Gary Brainless and did a handclap overdub.

Santo(Caleb): How was that?

G6(Andy): Well, he didn't get his nickname by accident.

Santo(Scott): How many times did you do the handclap in your song "Catherine?"

G6(Scott): We did it once, and fucked it up, and then did it again.

Santo(Scott): See, I only heard one handclap—clap clap, and that's all; 'cause I was thinking, alright, they're gonna start into some handclaps, but no, that's all you're gonna get—once.

G6(Scott): Actually its 4 claps...

Santo(Scott): But only once, that's weird! Don't you think that's weird?

G6(Shane): Don't you ever do that on drums when its a four repeat type chorus—just throw in a fill in one part and then don't do it again?

Santo(Scott): Fill? What's a fill? (laughter)

G6(Scott): You know, Phil...

On Band Dynamic

G6(Scott): We try not to take ourselves too seriously, hopefully Santo(Shane): Do you guys write in the studio?

G6(Scott): No, no—we write in our bedrooms.

Santo(Scott): Do you guys ever get mad at each other? Do voices get raised?

G6(Scott): Oh yeah, Shane and I had a bit of a tiff not long ago.

G6(Shane): Yeah, I almost quit a while ago.

Santo(Caleb) We always seem to end up recording our arguments for some reason. There's an argument on "Catfish" on our last tape Something Against You.

G6(Scott): What about the way you boys write songs?

Santo(Chris): Same sort of thing.

Santo(Shane): Someone comes in with 25% and the other guys add their 75%.

Santo(Chris): Rather than one guy totally dominating and saying, "play this or you can't be in my band anymore?" (laughter)

G6(Shane): I end up being the one in our band that dominates actually; I sit in the corner and yell.

G6(Scott): See, Dennis and I will sometimes come in before practice and work on some stuff, and then once we all get together, we both look right at Shane going "Is this OK? Is this OK?"

G6(Andy): But the thing is, because he's on drums, it's not like he can go and suggest something. "Instead of playing that part play something like this," for example, so he just takes parts away. When you bring in a song it's got to have a lot of parts to survive - at least 50 different parts.

G6(Scott): That's why all the songs are 3min. - cause they start out being 20 min; Shane just hacks it all off; he's the editor of the band.

G6(Dennis): Yeah, with Shane its always "loose this section" like in "Diggin-in" when he edited himself right out of the whole song...

G6(Scott): ...we're just making you look like total shit Shane...

On Lyrics

G6(Scott): So there's a lot of desperation in the vocals and in the music on your newest tape, String Fellow Hawk; that's what I hear, at least—because it goes really loud and really intense, and then just drops right off.

Santo(Caleb): I guess I've started singing in a higher register which makes it sound more angst ridden.

G6(Dennis): What is that song "Saltlick Baby" about?

Santo(Caleb): You mean "Starlick Baby," well um, you've heard the lyrics right?

G6(Dennis): Well, obviously not very well (laughter) I can't read, but I heard it.

Santo(Caleb): It's a dialogue about..well, chicks...

G6(Shane): ...all songs are about chicks and if they're not in motivation, they always sound like they are, so they might as well be.

G6(Scott): Now you're getting to see what we have to deal with when we write songs (points at Shane).

(Laughter)

Santo(Chris): We also have songs about cars.

G6(Scott): That's cool...

G6(Dennis): ...that's what a lot of the Papillomas songs on the Corolla CD are about.

G6(Shane): I think all lyrics are total bullshit!

G6(Dennis): Shane believes in anti-communication, he just makes up words as he's singing, like bleep bleep or blah blah blah.

G6(Shane): You're just going to be misunderstood anyway so what's the point? So many lyrics

SCHTUFFE...#4

The best (and only) one man 'zine from Powell River, BC, and Jason Schruers never fails to deliver. This issue has 'zine and record reviews, an entertaining "babble" page, two reviews of Pulp Fiction, interviews with Down By Law, and Jason's friend Karl, and a gig diary from a few years ago which lacks the flavour of his other reviews. Jason takes you step by step through the hassles of putting out a CD compilation. Sounds like fun! There's also a page on Schtuffe...mail order.

SOME 'ZINEEMIT #6, 7

This is a really entertaining read, although most of the music covered is of a more mainstream taste. Mostly interviews: Mudhoney, Jello Biafra, Doo Rag, Mike Watt, some guy named Les Claypool (bassist, Primus, ed.), a bunch of bands I've never heard of, and one of my favorite bands, Tilt. A pile o' record and show reviews, plus stuff on MusicWest, and the Slam City Jam. #4 was the first Emit I have ever bought, and it rocked, but all the cool columns and stuff disappeared in #5, and it hasn't been the same (or as good) since. Still pretty funny, though.

PROFANE EXISTENCE #25

#25 is the first issue of this 'zine I have bought. I've read the articles in it in stores before, and was impressed. Non of that Punkerthanthou, We're more punk than you Crap;. Just anarchy and lots of it. This issue has the typical review section, plus political stuff, a review of the Anarchy in the UK festival in London, and lots o' reports of anarchy (I think I've used this word waaaay too many times already) around the world. There's also an interesting article on how to make yr own beer! So, if you're looking for a zine with no corporate shit and no rules of what's punk, make sure P.E. is the next zine ya pick up!

JUXTSUPPOSE #2

I couldn't really make much sense outta this zine. Lots of hard work went into gluing funny little things into each other to make it 3D. From what I can tell, lots of writing is quotes from other things they liked. This isn't a music zine, but I don't really know what it is. They say order #1 and maybe you could make some sense out of this one. I dunno. Lotsa comics and stuff, too. Whatever.

MAXIMUM ROCKNROLLdouble issue #151

Where else could you find more ads? This double issue was awesome. I thought I'd died and gone to punk rock heaven. Two, count 'em, two Reverend NORb columns in one month! If the rest of MRR wasn't so rad, I'd probably buy it JUST for his lunatic rantings. The first of his two columns is titled, 'Is Jello a Fuck?' the second, 'Is Ben a Fuck? (am i? are you?)'. It also has two columns by George Tabb, the first being an amusing tale of his trip to an MTV party, and how people thought he was someone famous (including eMpTyV vj Kennedy), the second is about his first encounter with Ian McKaye and Minor Threat. This issue has two bits by Adrienne Droogas plus two guest columns by Donny the Punk, and minus Ben Weasel, all the other usual ones.

PUNK PLANET #9

No other zine could get away with copying MRR so much and still come up smelling successful. MRR style columns, cheap newsprint (which means you get black hands), and Rev. NORb. What more could ya ask for? This issue has a cool flexi inside from Lookout! Records featuring the Queens, The MTX, Squirtgun, and the High-Fives. Interviews with the MTX, Hellbender, the Lunachicks, Earth Crisis, and Reverend NORb. There's also some cool fiction, an article about punks on the internet, and stuff about that show—Punk Uprisings. Plus reviews of other cool shit.

FOR YOU

and now a plug for my own zine...

Public AffairsRevolution in Chiapas

It's been two years since the Zapatistas declared war on Mexico, and a year since the Mexican army was sent in to destroy the rebel army. The uprising made big headlines in corporate press for about a month, but the initial sensational glam has long since slipped into back issues. Collective amnesia is slowly engulfing yet another resistance and corporate press is not reporting on the atrocities that are continuing under the influences of Free Trade.

This February 9th marks one year since the Mexican army went into the Lacandon Jungle to eliminate the Zapatistas National Liberation Army. President Zedillo ordered the offensive just days after the announcement that the US would guarantee a $47.5 billion aid to the Mexican economy.

Coincidental timing?

A January 13/95 "Political Update" from Chase Bank of New York (which has billions invested in Mexico) read "While Chiapas, in our opinion, does not pose a fundamental threat to Mexican political stability, it is perceived to be so by many in the investment community. The government will need to eliminate the Zapatistas to demonstrate their effective control of the national territory and security policy." (CovertAction Spring 1995)

The Zapatistas' uprising began on January 1, 1994, the same day the NAFTA went into effect. The rebellion effectively drew attention to the social and economic consequences of free trade. The Zapatistas released a declaration of war, "Today we say enough is enough!... We declare that we will not stop fighting until the basic demands of our people have been met by forming a government of our country that is free and democratic. Join the insurgent forces of the Zapatistas Army of National Liberation." In the early hours of Jan 1, upward of 2000 peasants took over a series of towns in the southern state of Chiapas, including the historic city of San Cristobal de las Casas. Insurgents targeted symbols of repression, they burned the Justice Department, freed hundred of prisoners from local jails and took over stores of food and medicine, distributing them to the people. The treaty was denounced as a "death sentence for Mexico's indigenous populations." Under NAFTA, according to calculations by a national alliance of peasant groups, at least 3 million Mexican peasants will be driven off the land. (La Jornada, Dec 30/93) Workers are also targeted by the treaty and US investors. According to the Chase Bank memo, Zedillo must choose between "either rejecting worker demands for higher wages... or yielding to worker demands which will further aggravate the economic situation." Meanwhile US corporations are moving in to take advantage of Mexico's already slack labour and environmental regulations. But resistance continues to grow in Mexico and abroad. Armed guerrilla units are operating in 14 Mexican states under 11 separate organizations. (CovertAction Spring 95) And the Mexican people continue to support resistance to Zedillo and free trade.

Listen to CFUV on February 9 at 5pm for a special one-hour documentary about the Zapatistas and their continuing struggle. ▲ are built to hide the meaning of what they're about.

Santo(Josh): A lot of Caleb's lyrics are very much a stream of consciousness approach.

Santo(Scott): But once we learn a song they never play or sing it the same.

G6(Andy): Does anybody have some closing remarks?

G6(Shane): Santo are really good, so come and see Gallery 6, and somebody sign Santo!

Santo(Chris): I appreciate that.

G6(Andy): Anything people should know about coming up for Santo?

Santo(Caleb): We have a new tape out called String Fellow Hawk and we're playing at the Nautilus Club (Cook st) on Feb 9th. ▲

Eat Static
Abduction
Planet Dog

They call this type of music progressive techno. It is more like joyfully paranoid music. Eat Static has really helped to shape what we call techno today and in their latest album, Abduction, their obsession with grey aliens, UFO abductions, and even crop circles is cunningly orchestrated. The music itself is nothing short of hardcore with beats reaching epileptic speeds and melodies that are sure to get you head bobbing. The music drills deep into your veins, causing your body to vibrate in unison with the pulsating beats. It is no wonder that four of the songs on this album made it to the compilation Transmissions From Planet Dog, featuring the best music the label has to offer. The fact that this album abducts you from reality and whisks you into a realm of musical ecstasy fully justifies its name. As the first song on the album, Prana, states, "We're not dropping out of here, we're infiltrating and taking over."

Cypress Hill
Temples of Boom
Columbia

Race yourself. This is no "boo-ya boo-ya scooby scooby do ya." This is Cypress Hill on a new tip. The track "Killa Hill Niggaz" produced by the RZA must've left Muggs scratchin' his dome. The time spent with the RZA (Wu Tang's beat master) is obvious. Muggs has changed his sounds to the stripped down east coast feel.

The love for buddha, weed, chronic, and the mary jane is everpresent. So are the bone-crunching allusions to potential violence. B-Real still has the most nasal/cartoon character voice, and Sen-Dog still backs him up with his tough ex-con antics.

The most interesting track is "No Rest For The Wicked," a blast at hip hop cornerstone/icon Ice Cube. This track goes off. The beats are hard, and Sen-Dog's challenge with the "I got a can of kick ass with your name on it Cube..." prepare the west coast hip hop communities for some verbal throwin' down on the next few albums. "Locotes" also rips the listeners ears out with the "four and three and two and one..." The intro to "Throw Your Sets in the Air" with OG Showtime bringing in a new gangmember is what sociology classes should be all about.

This is a new season for Cypress. They proved themselves hardcore on the first two joints, and they ain't slidin by on this one either. When Sen-Dog states that they are the hardest posse out there, he ain't lying.

Elektro Genetics Vol. 1
Crack!

Elektro Genetics is the type of CD which one would normally slip past as you browse through CDs. The cover of the CD is very plain and cheesy, but it in no way represents the music in it. I am not a fan of acid, but I must admit to liking the music on this CD. The first two songs have cool drumbeats and good samples. The third and fourth songs are rather repetitive at the beginning, but when the beats finally roll in, the songs turn out to be pretty good. Funny Knobs is by far one of my favorites because it is a mixture of trance rave and acid. I found myself putting this one on repeat because it gave a truly mind numbing experience. Bubble features a severely modified voice and Modular Noise Funk lives up to its name. Saturn Six is the definition of rave music while, in contrast, Robobum sounds more like funky acid. Outburst lays down a very aggressive atmosphere and I visualized dark alleys and bad neighbourhoods when listening to it. All in all? Not a bad album (it's all Canadian artists you know!) if you like trance with a pinch of acid.

Let's just say I took the medication...and found: deepspace slidin' rhymes to sweeten the flyin' brass, nasty funk with a high hat flair groovin' on with keyboard and occasional orchestral interludes caressing the heavy grind, itchin' drums, Old School scratches spasmodically snatching, snatching, snapping Great funky fun. "Bust A Nut." I'm hooked.

Onyx
All We Got Iz Us
Def Jam

When BACDAFUCUP dropped a few years ago, it changed my life. The "Slam" video was about as hardcore as I'd seen it. The anger still rumbles on All We Got Iz Us. As a matter of fact, the track called "Punkmotherfukaz" which is only about a minute long, may be the angriest piece of music I've ever heard.

NOI22N0210

The Onyx scream is still in effect. Sticky Fingaz's voice is almost to the point of being shorted out. This is rap angst at its finest. Lyrical skills abound on "Purse Snatchaz," and anthemic rap is in effect with "Betta Off Dead." The best line in the whole album is Sticky's begging, "Please, somebody kill me before I put two in my own head!"

I wouldn't say that this is the best that Onyx could do, however. A sense of rushed production seems to cloud some of the tracks. Furthermore, the cheesy skits, specifically "Life or Death," are played and tired. But Onyx is back, their next outing is definitely going to be sink or swim for these dudes.

Genius
Liquid Swords
Geffen

Can you say bomb neighbourhood? The beats and rhymes throughout the entire CD are PHAT. It is completely apparent why the Genius/GZA is the leader of the Wu-Tang Clan. Raekwon dropped a hard album with Cuban Linx, but the Genius seems to have a lot more to say. Of course, the karate flick samples don't hurt either.

Labels is one of the more interesting jams, with just about every hip-hop record label indicated (except his own, hmmm.). Other jams to look out for are Investigative Reports and Cold World.

The RZA production signature is everywhere. This is the East Coast, baby. The beats are a little more smooth than the high pitched whining/moog organ/Parliament samples that we of the west are so damn used to. This is a must for any hip-hopper, you head will be nodding. One complaint: the song titles are put in an order that tell a little story, not in the order in which they are played. This is frustrating when breaking in a new album.

Tougher Than Tough: The Story of Jamaican Music
Mango

For fans of Jamaican music, the Tougher Than Tough box set is just as essential as Songs Of Freedom, the Bob Marley box set, and of the same high quality. Anyone who has the Marley set will know that this is no small claim, but I stand firm. I give thanks and praise to Mango Records for putting this one out.

Tougher Than Tough is a well put together history of Jamaican music. There are about 100 songs, on four disks, covering 35 years of music (from 1958 to 1993). The set's 65 page booklet includes a preface by Chris Blackwell, an intro by Linto Kwesi Johnson, and a 10 page history of Jamtown music by Steve Barrow. The

Ryszard Kapuscinski
Imperium
Vintage

Ryszard Kapuscinski's Imperium is one of those rare books that reveals, without pessimism, some of the greatest social and political tragedies of this century. Kapuscinski presents us with a personal and historical journey through the former Soviet Union. It is a journey which is simultaneously tragic and beautiful.

Imperium is presented in three parts; "First Encounters (1939-1967)" begins the book. It is a story of refugees, of the author's first taste of war and the Imperium as Soviet troops move into his hometown. Next we join Kapuscinski as he is traveling across Siberia, from Peking to Moscow along the trans-Siberian Railway, and then follow him on an expedition across the former USSR's seven southern republics: Georgia, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Turkmenistan, Tajikistan, Kyrgystan, and Uzbekistan. We are left with a brief but concise overview of the people and politics of these republics; this is the foundation on which the next part of the book is built.

Imperium

by Ryszard Kapuscinski

The second part of Imperium is called "From a Bird's Eye View (1989-1991)." In Part Two, we follow the author on a journey which covers about sixty thousand kilometers, from the border of Poland to the Pacific, and from north of the Arctic circle to the Iranian border. This is really the heart of the book and it is during the course of this journey that we get a sense of the scope and depth of Kapuscinski as a reporter, historian, and author. Kapuscinski takes us across these lands and imparts to his reader a sense of the rich history of these places while successfully conveying how the landscape, and particularly the vast wilderness, has shaped the people of the nation.

Part Three is called "The Sequel Continues (1992-1993)" and is a collection of notes and observations from the author's travels, conversations, and readings.

The book ends with a quote from Tolstoy, which is tinged with a unique blend of resigned inevitability and optimism. Imperium has been clearly and lyrically translated by Klara Glowczewska, and is a valuable asset to anyone with an interest in Soviet History, Politics, or Literature.

One night in late November, when the four boys were having a sleepover at Dave's house, they were visited by the ghost of Platinum Blonde's career. The ghost told them that they would be visited by three spirits that night, and to expect the first within an hour. The ghost vanished in a cloud of smoke, with lasers and pyrotechnics. The hour passed and sure enough, on cue one hour later, beer started to leak from the ceiling forming a puddle in the centre of the room. Suddenly the puddle took the shape of a man. He spoke, slightly drunk, saying, "I'm the ghost of John Labbat and you must go on a great journey, and drink as much beer as possible. You will do this? If you swear, you will be rewarded." So they all swore to go, and with a giant burp, Mr. Labbat vanished—leaving behind many flats of beer. Before they had finished the first flat, they heard a distant engine. They looked out the window, and saw a flying bathtub, with a pirate in it. As it got closer to the window, they realised the pirate was Nanaimo's former, now deceased, Mayor Frank Ney. He spoke, moderately drunk, saying, "You boys are the pride of Nanaimo. I want you to carry a message of joy from Nanaimo to the rest of the world. You will do this? You will be rewarded." They agreed and as the mayor flew into the night, a van in the shape of a bathtub appeared in the driveway. They were about to go out into the van when the smelled the distinct scent of peanut butter and toast. They ran up into the kitchen and saw Elvis sitting at the table with his face covered in peanut butter and banana. "Oh, sorry boys," the King said, "I was comin' to talk to y'all but I got hungry on the way. I hope you don't mind—I helped myself. You boys have to help me. I've been observing the state of music from on high, and I've become very disappointed. The Presidents of the United States Of America, Silverchair, and your own countrywoman, Alanis Morissette are destroying music as we know it, and it's up to you boys to save the musical world. Will you help me? You will be greatly rewarded." As they agreed, the cupboards filled with peanut butter, a new bread maker appeared on the counter, and a banana tree appeared in the yard. The Papillomas also found themselves in the finest polyester jumpsuits, with slick pompadours. In a shower of sequins, Elvis disappeared, and a voice came from nowhere to say, "Elvis has left the kitchen."

The boys then swore to rawk the world while maintaining their close ties to Nanaimo while drinking as much beer as they possibly can. From that day forward, the Papillomas, fine purveyors of Jiffy Pop, have seen a million faces and rawked them all. ▲ book explains every song, and includes pictures of reggae artists and Jamaica.

The music is chosen well, and there's a lot of it. The first disk bounces along with tunes like "My Boy Lollipop," by Millie, and "Guns of Navarone," by the Skatalites. Disk two slows down just a bit, with songs like "54-46" by the Maytals, and Big Youth's hard classic, "5.90 Skank."

Disk three gets really serious, including "Right Time," by the Mighty Diamonds, "Fort Augustus," by Juniper Delgado, and "Two Sevens Clash," by Culture. Finally, the last disk gets right into the Dancehall scene, featuring all the big name

DJs. I was also particularly happy to see two songs by Gregory Isaacs fitting nicely between Barrington Levy, Tiger, Tenor Saw, Buju Banton, and the others.

Overall, Mango has done an excellent job in providing reggae fans with a comprehensive history. So if you like Jamaican music and culture, get the Tougher Than Tough box set. Seen? As Big Youth once said: "Right now, de riddim jus' holdin' I. De riddim wild!"
